
Red Gate Sql Data Compare Serial Number

Figure 3 is the actual compare dialog box on a screen capture of the actual results. The header matching works as expected. It takes a moment for the data to load (even though all of the rows are there), but it is clear that the data is correct from the start. The new record has rows with missing data and the old record has rows with extra data. Figure 4 - Figure 4 Figure 4 is the actual compare dialog box on a screen capture of the actual results. The Header to Header matching works as expected, and both records look the same. We do have a few numbers off, but not so much that the data has to be decoupled and repopulated. For example, the prices are mismatched by 2 cents. After upgrading to SQL Data Compare 13.1.1, I forgot to clear the SVCDBs and Tags table. Once I realised this, I was able to get rid of all the problematic columns that SQL Data Compare automatically creates, but it took me quite a few tries to get it right. I'm not sure why these columns get created automatically, but it seems to have something to do with the delta tables that the previous product created. If you leave the MySqlDBs setting blank, the following information gets sent to the Redgate servers: Database name, Database server name, DB user name, User ID, Process ID, Command line, Asynchronous dispatcher, Asynchronous dispatcher thread number, Active time in seconds, Scheduling record number, Wait time in seconds, Total waits in seconds. After upgrading to SQL Data Compare 13.1.1, you will be unable to view the Activation and Licensing Information page. The Activation tab is not available because the SqlDataCompareUI assembly is not on the output path.

Red Gate Sql Data Compare Serial Number

If you try to activate a Red Gate Customer Tool on a machine running a very old version of a Red Gate tool then you will get the message All of the entitlements for this serial number have already been claimed and you will need to log into your customer portal and issue a new activation. If you are using Red Gate tools then it is extremely important that you log in to your customer portal with your Red Gate ID. If you have forgotten your password you can use the reset link in your customer portal. If you are logged in as someone else you will be sent a message advising you of the problem and you will need to check your access logs to see if you have been logged in as someone else. Here's where some of the magic happens. When you ask Red Gate to transfer a license to a machine that is not logged into your portal via the customer portal, Red Gate will issue a new activation automatically. They will then send a push notification to your phone. This is why it is crucial that you login to your portal with your Red Gate ID. You need to login to your portal to request a new activation, which is the only way for you to see the new email and click the notification in it. On the following page you will be asked to input a serial number for the activation. This must be a serial number that has never been used and it is highly recommended that you add a counter to the serial number to avoid errors. If you enter a serial number that has been used you will get a message saying that the licence has already been activated. What you must do next is to confirm that the serial number you entered matches what is displayed in the email. If it does then you can use the same serial number to activate the licence on other machines by simply adding a counter to the serial number.
